THE present Volume, compiled on the principles detailed by Mr. Lemon in his Preface to the Volume of State Paper Calendars edited by him, is the first of a series of three, which will include the English State Papers of the time of James I. As it commences with the virtual, though not nominal, union of the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, it has been thought advisable that the Scottish Papers, which, antecedent to this period, are a distinct series, should be incorporated with the English.

The Papers relating to the Gunpowder Plot also, which have hitherto formed a separate collection, are now calendared in chronological sequence with the other Papers.

The Second Volume is already in progress, and will be completed, it is hoped, in the course of next year; and the concluding Volume will follow as rapidly as may be, consistently with the care required in the compilation of works of this description.

Asks if Lady Northumberland's petition be granted. She wishes stay to be made of any petition of right, on behalf of the heirs of the Perrot family, for the lands of Sir John Perrot attainted, having resigned a pension of 400*l.* per ann. from the late Queen, in lieu of her recent grant of 500*l.* per ann. from those lands.

March 4. Queen's Court. 8. Visct. Cranborne to the Same. In spite of Mrs. Drummond's importunity, the payment of bills for the Queen is obliged to be postponed, for want of money. Rather than fail in payments for Queen Elizabeth's tomb, neither the Exchequer nor London shall have a penny left. Rejoices to falsify the prophecy that no child of Henry VIII. should be handsomely buried. The Lord Chamberlain concurs with the "little beagle" [Cranborne] in thinking the King's return from his sports unnecessary, till the 17th or 18th of the month.

Understands the King is reluctant to sign grants during his recreations, but that of the office of keeper of Carlisle Castle for Sir Hen. Leigh is pressing, as he wishes to hasten after the other Border Commissioners. Dean Montague told Bywater that the King would have released him, but for the Council. She is cajoled by corrupt servants, into pressing the King for suits for other men's advantage, in which she has no interest. Is hawking with the Chamberlain, and the Earls of Cumberland, Southampton, and Devonshire, but to-morrow all go home to school. Dated "from Theobald's, where a pack of Brittons have presumed to drink a health to the King of Brittany."

March 9. 17. Same to the Same. Points out the ill use which malicious people may make of the King's recent placard for preserving the game at Thetford, as though he claimed all for his own. The surrender of Owen earnestly demanded from the Archduke. Northumberland suspected because of Percy s near relationship to him, and of his admitting him to be King's Pensioner, without taking the oath of Supremacy; also because he intended to take medicine, and be absent the first day of Parliament. Lord Mordaunt ill off, for there was a plot for murdering the King at his house, but it was hindered by a Jesuit, because there was "a course in hand" to "cutte up the very roots." Arguments why Owen should not be surrendered. Barnes offers his services to go into Flanders.

Was not at Mrs. Vaux's about the 5th of November; has not seen Gerard, the Jesuit, lately; has said he hoped the King was not excommunicated, as it would give foreign princes a pretence to attack him; Garnet is his superior; never wrote to Davies before his coming from St. Omer, nor inquired after "stirring spirits," to whom to reveal "the main project;" knew of no oath of secresy.

* In this letter and five others, Nos. 242 to 246, Gunpowder Plot Book, the important portion was written with orange juice, so as to be invisible to a casual observer, and thus the letters passed through the hands of the Lieutenant of the Tower. They excited suspicion from the size of the paper employed, and the insignificance of their palpable contents. They were therefore examined, and the secret writing being discovered, were used as evidence against Garnet. Each is accompanied with a transcript, as complete as the faded state of the writing permits, made by Mr. Lemon.

March 6. 16. Examination of Hen. Garnet. Confesses that he came to Mr. Abington's house, Henlip, Dec. 4th, and remained there till apprehended, with Hall, Chambers, and Owen; White Webbs was taken by him for their meetings; Mrs. Anne Vaux, alias Perkins, he, and Brookesby, bore the expenses; had a conference with Faukes last Easter, in Thames Street; met Catesby and others at Sir Everard Digby's, Nov. 1st, and met Catesby in Moorfields at Whitsuntide; wrote to Father Baldwin to commend Sir Edw. Baynham as a soldier.

March 6. Examination of Edw. Oldcorne. Sent for Garnet from Coughton to Mr. Abington's; Tesmond came, Nov. 6th, from Huddington to Henlip, and told them of the Plot and its failure, and of the rising; they refused to join it; Tesmond was angry, and set off to rouse Catholics in Lancashire. In their conferences in the Tower, Garnet told him that if Catesby accused him (Garnet) of the Plot, he wronged him; that he hoped his being at Coughton was not known, as that was the worst thing against him; that Lord Monteagle* had written letters by Sir Edw. Baynham; that he (Garnet), on Nov. 1st, had taken the lead in private prayers for the destruction of heresy. [G. Plot Bk., No. 197.]

March 6. Tower. Examination of the Same. Declines to say whether Chambers is his servant; Garnet told him he might acknowledge White Webbs, as the Lords had promised not to harm the parties there; they met at White Webbs twice a year, to confess and renew their vows; particulars of his Tower conversations with Garnet. VOL. XIX.

March 9. 27. [Earl of Salisbury] to the Earl of Mar. Divers priests were concerned in the Gunpowder Treason, but none have been apprehended except Walley, who confesses his privity, but says that he dissuaded from it. Importance of convincing the world that he is punished for treason, not for religion; the King will have the three Lords tried in the Star Chamber, not by common law. Differences in the Parliament concerning enactments against papists, and as to the punishment of non-communicants. Two subsidies granted; more asked for. Abuses of Purveyors suppressed. The King of France raises troops against the Duke of Bouillon. In spite of all the Scots' boast of religion, for 100 English that go to serve the Archduke, there are 500 Scots, many of them his (Mar's) followers.

March 10. 28. Edward Lord Cromwell to Salisbury. Urges the conclusion of his controversy with the college of [All Souls] Oxford, relative to Wadborough, which he has sold to the Earl of Devon, to satisfy his creditors, who have seized his coach and horses.

1606. VOL. XIX.

March 11. York. Information of Phil. Thirlewell, of Hexham, Northumberland, as to the speeches of John Healey, servant to Lancelot Carnaby, on praying for Percy and his company, and on "another barrell yet to be broached." [G. Plot Bk., No. 199. See March 1.]

March 11. Examination of Anne Vaux. Keeps White Webbs at her own expense; since August last has visited her friends; came to London with Mrs. Abington; Catesby, Winter, and Tresham have been to her house; Wm. Shepherd, Rob. Avery, and Rob. Marshall have left her service; went to St. Winifred's Well, with Lady Digby and others whom she will not name; knew nothing of the Plot; told Garnet she feared that the horses at Winter's and Grant's were for mischief, and begged him to prevent it. He spoke to Catesby, who said they were for the Low Countries; was at Coughton Nov. 1, but knows nothing of the prayer there. [Ibid., No. 200.]

March 12. Note by Anne Vaux. Is sorry to hear that Father Garnet was privy to the Plot, as he made many protestations to the contrary. [Ibid., No. 201.]

March 12. Voluntary declaration of Edw. Oldcorne. His conversation with Humphrey Littleton, that the rightfulness of Catesby's Plot was not to be judged by its good or ill success. [Ibid., No. 202.]

March 12. Copy of the above. [Ibid., No. 203.]

Two witnesses declare that he (Carleton) was "privy to the hiring of the house for the main blow." Lady Fanshaw going out of town.

March 12. Tower. 40. Examination of Hen. Garnet. The letter sent by Sir Everard Digby was to say they were going into Wales; last July, Tesmond, alias Greenwell, revealed Catesby's project to him; Catesby promised him he would not proceed without asking directions from the Pope, how to relieve English Catholics; Catesby or Winter told the Plot to Tesmond, but as he was told it in confession, he ought not to reveal it, even to the Pope; efforts by foreign Ambassadors to obtain relief for Catholics from the King; Father Parsons wrote to him last Michaelmas, to ask what plots the Catholics had on hand; did not answer the letter; burnt all his letters from Rome, and kept no copies of his answers.

VOL. XIX.

March 13. 41. Declaration by Garnet, that since the King's accession, he had tried to persuade Catesby not to plot against Government, that course being forbidden by the Pope. In June, 1604, Catesby and Winter told him of a sure plot they had, but gave no particulars; Greenwell told him they had something in hand, but he (Garnet) disapproved of it; could not persuade Catesby that it was unlawful to take arms.

March 13. 42. Voluntary confession of Hen. Garnet. About a year before the late Queen's death, he received two briefs from Rome, one addressed to the lay Catholics, and one to the priests, bidding them not consent to any successor to the Crown who would not submit to Rome; he kept them secret during Elizabeth's reign, and burnt them on her death, but had shewed them to Catesby, who considered that they authorized his proceedings. There was a league between the Pope and the Kings of France and Spain, to establish a Catholic successor to Queen Elizabeth, by means of an armed force, but her death put an end to the project.

March 13. 43. Thos. Strange [to the Lords Commissioners]. The first news of the Plot was brought by Hen. Huddleston to Harrowden, on 4th November, Mr. Jarret [Gerard] and Mr. Singleton present; he left Harrowden and went to Henlip.

March 14. Tower. 44. Examination of Hen. Garnet. On arrival of the two briefs above named, he showed them to Catesby, Percy, and Winter, at White Webbs; but finding all quiet on the Queen's death, he burnt them; Greenwell told him the design of the Plot, but refused to tell particulars, being bound to secresy.

March 14? 45. Declaration by the Lord Treasurer of the state of the King's receipts at the Parliament, anno tertio, the Crown debts being 735,280*l.* [See Journ. Commons, vol. 1, p. 284.]

March 14? 46. Statement of the whole receipts and disbursements of the Crown, as rendered by Auditors at the same Parliament.

March 14? 47. Anonymous to the King. Bitter complaints against the Council, who rule him, and will not suffer him to relieve his people. The Masters of Requests attend to the rich, and put off the poor. The "covetous bloody Popham" will ruin many poor men, by his offer to drain the Fens. Complaints of glass-houses and iron mills, which consume wood; of the growth of wood and manufacture of starch, which make land and flour dear. Additional subsidies demanded; "horrible fees" of lawyers; proposed fines on assart lands; flesh-eating in Lent. The King laughed at for giving up housekeeping to economize; the Commons trenching upon the prerogative; "in her Ma$^{ty's}$ time, all the subiectes in England durst not once think of it, or crosse her in whatsoever; your Ma^{tie} wanteth some of her knoledge, bredeinge, and stomache."

1606. Vol. XIX.

March 16. 48. Particulars of disbursement of 400*l.*, issued by orders of six of the Council. Part of it was paid for arrest and prison expenses of the late traitors.

[March 19.] 58. Message from the Same to the Same. Thanks for their readiness in granting him an additional supply. Will not abridge their freedom. Is glad to be thus enabled to repay his loans.

March 19. 59. Salisbury to Sir Hen. Wotton, Ambassador at Venice. Praises the course he took with the Papal Nuncio. People may now see that the severe laws against Catholics are not made against them merely for their religion, but for treason; since Garnet, the Provincial of the Jesuits, not only confesses his knowledge of the Gunpowder Plot, but thinks it justifiable. Parliament has made severe laws against the papists, and granted the King liberal supplies. Has no authority to permit the return to England of [Sir Rob.] Bassett or [Thos.] Fitzherbert; the times are not fitting for their recall. Bassett's goods will be confiscated, to satisfy some French merchants, robbed by a pirate for whom he was surety. Two extracts.

Nov. 21. Royston. 26. Sir Thos. Lake to Four Lords [the Earls of Salisbury, Northampton, Suffolk, and Worcester, see Nov. 23]. The King wishes to know whether the motion of the House of Commons relative to marriages [in the contract for tenures] had been suggested by any of the Lords; he fears it is a ruse to obtain a prolongation of their sittings. Misdoings of the present Parliament. His Majesty purposes to send them a message that he means to dissolve Parliament before Christmas; in the mean time, if they will make a clear offer to him for the custody of wards and marriage of heirs, including support as well as supply, they may hope for a gracious answer. The King thinks the notion that he wishes to retain the custody of wards that he may marry them to Scots, is ridiculous.

1610. Vol. LVIII.

Nov. 22. Royston. 27. Sir Thos. Lake to the Earl of Salisbury. Incloses a letter to the Earl of Worcester, about the Masque matters. The King suspects that the House only seeks to prolong its sittings. If the matter of the marriages be long in hand, His Majesty will hardly have patience with it. Nov. 23. Royston. 30. The King to the Lords Treasurer, Privy Seal, Chamberlain, and the Earl of Worcester. If the Lower House desire a conference with the Upper, to treat only of marriages and custody of the bodies of heirs, their wish is to be complied with.

Nov. 23. Royston. 31. Sir Thos. Lake to [Salisbury.] Cautions to be observed in allowing the matter of marriages to be treated in Parliament. The King hopes supply will not be utterly refused. Some papers of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, on church matters, are to be sent for, for the King's use.

Nov. 24. Royston. 32. Same to [the Same.] Acknowledges his letters. The King wishes the Parliament to be adjourned with the expectation of meeting again, and not be dissolved, if any hope remain of obtaining supply. The King will return to Theobalds to confer with his Lordship, if Parliament continue. The imposition was laid on Scotch wines before the King's coming out of Scotland, and the memorial is false. Sends a letter of Sir Hen. Nevill, relative to a proposed purchase of —— forest.

Nov. 24. Entry of the above. [Warrt. Bk. II., p. 180.]

Nov. 25. Royston. 35. Sir Thos. Lake to [Salisbury.] The King understands that the Commons intend only to refuse supply, and to consider fresh grievances. Unless good assurance can be had of different procedure, they are to be dissolved as quietly as may be, for he will endure no further taunts and disgraces. His Majesty has had patience, but "he cannot have asinine patience." He thinks some of the speeches uttered in the House approach very nearly to treason, and that he shall have ground to call the speakers to account, &c.

Nov. 25. Royston. 36. Same to [the Same.] Incloses the King's packet for the Queen. His Majesty will arrange a meeting with his Council, if there be sufficient ground, but he thinks nothing can be done except to dismiss the Parliament.

With order thereon. [See June 16 and May 8.]

Nov. 26. Royston. 38. Sir Thos. Lake to [the Same.] His Majesty thinks a meeting with the Council about the form of dissolving the House needless; proposes an adjournment to the next term, and then a dissolution. The letter from the two Dutch Princes, intimating a new suit for assistance and despair of agreement, displeases the King.

Nov. 26. London House. 39. George Abbot, Bishop of London, to the Same. Sends some of the books and papers which he has seized in the house of Dixon, a scrivener, whom he has committed.

Nov. 26. Warrant to pay to Sir Thos. Thynne, 100*l.* for rent of his house, hired for the French Ambassador. [Sign Man., Vol. i., No. 47.]

Nov. 27. Royston. 40. Sir Thos. Lake to [Salisbury.] The King thinks the adjournment of Parliament should be longer than till Monday, in order to give time for consideration of his Council, with whom he would not have a formal meeting, because it would seem as though some great matter were in hand. The Parliament to be prorogued on pretence that the gentlemen of the better sort should be in their country residences about Christmas, in order to relieve the people with hospitality; that the King is absent on recreation; and that he expects a French Ambassador to settle the league between the kingdoms. The mention of King Joram troubles His Majesty much; the speaker is to be found out, and punished.

Nov. 28. Royston. 41. Same to [the Same.] His Majesty wishes only one long adjournment of the Parliament till Candlemas, and then its dissolution, &c. Arrangements for two or three Privy Councillors to meet His Majesty privately, if needful. Lord Worcester's letter is about the Princess Elizabeth.
